Fox had not taken the precaution to go up and down the street in his auto warming people not to go too fast. There were two more automobiles which the police tried to capture, but they were going at such a rate it was impossible to stop them and their numbers could not be taken. Two riders of motor cycles would have been captured if they could have been taken. It appears that both of the men from Bridgeport who were brought before Justice Wakeman were young men. One of them had ladies with him, and they urged him to put on speed. It is said that the next time the State police come to town to stop speeding

Sir:-I note in recent copies of your valuable newspaper two items, as fol-

"The four men were held in bail of $1,500 each, or $6.000 in all. They stole brass valued at $200."

"Fisher, the Yale man, who has traveled all over the world, and whose mother is wealthy, was held in $3,000 for killing the 13 year old boy, Christiansen, the son of a carpenter, with his automobile, which he was speeding."

And I call your attention, Mr. Edi-tor to the item clipped from Rey-nolds' Newspaper, London, England, issue of April 11, 1909, as follows:

The wedding party took carriages and drove to St. Paul's rectory, where Rev. Allen Beeman performed the ceremony. The bride wore a pretty costume of white embroidered muslin, with a veil and carried a bouquet of white bride roses. The maid of honor was her sister, Mrs. Lockwood, who was also dressed in white, with a bouquet of pink roses. Steven Kelley of Bridgeport was the best man. The bridesmaid was Miss Hannah Kowalskie. A reception followed at the residence of the bride's parents, just off the Danbury road leading to the beach. This is the land of liberty, perhaps. But most of the liberty seems to be for gentlemen who own automobiles. I am one who politically, for racial reasons, has never been the friend of the British, but I am constrained to admit that over there they sent Wright, a promoter of the general type of our most esteemed high financiers, by and go untouched of justice. In this country it almost looks as if the Mary Interpretation of the Strike of the Stri ies make it an invariable rule to buy their clothes season after season of in the newest shapes at very moderate prices. For men, there are swell looking blue serge suits, fancy suits in the latest patterns and colors, and straw hats, while for the boys there are two-piece suits that will wear like iron. Also there is a complete shoe department showing all that is attractive and serviceable in summer footwear for men, women and children. Charles Hawtrey's Twang. "Once on a time"-it is Charles Hawtrey who tells this tale-"I tried to sink my identity in the part of a man who was my dearest friend. I had known him since he was a haby. I wanted to sink my own identity and copy him. I was not allowed to. This is how it

"De Wolf Hopper had put on in London a burlesque of a play in which Mrs. Langtry and myself were acting. Some one burlesqued me, of course He had merely a few lines to say, but he did it very well. It so happened that on the night it was produced I was not acting. So I strolled round to Hopper's theater and suggested to him that I should take the part myself that night. The idea of parodying oneself seemed to me rather original. He consented, and on I went just in dress clothes, as the character called for. It was a great success, all except the identification. I lost that, but not enough. The London Times came out the next morning with the following:

"The resemblance to Mr. Hawtrey was certainly remarkable and would have been more so had it not been for the pronounced American accent." "That was the first and last time have ever been accused of a twang."-
